

The Future of Korea

A program of the World Affairs Councils of America and the Korean Economic Institute.

Join us for a discussion on Tuesday, August 22nd to deepen the understanding of Korea and U.S.-Korea relations!

Tuesday, August 22
5:30 registration
6:00 dinner
6:45 - 8:30 program

Location: Nicholson's & The Backstage Event Center
625 Walnut St, Cincinnati, OH
45202

Members $30
Non Members $40
Students $10

Members of partner organizations receive discounted member pricing.

LIMITED NUMBER OF SEATS AVAILABLE
DEADLINE 8/14

RSVP: GLOBALCINCINNATI.ORG

Partners: Foreign Policy Leadership Council, Xavier University Brueggeman Center, Chinese Chamber of Commerce

Audrey Hsieh, Foreign Affairs Office, U.S. Department of State

Hsieh currently works at the Office of Korea Affairs focusing on North Korea issues. Recently served as an Advisor to the Special Envoy for Guantanamo Closure negotiating humane treatment and security assurances for the transfer of detainees. To learn more about Hsieh, click here.

Troy Stangarone, Senior Director, Korea Economic Institute (KEI)

Stangarone oversees KEI's trade and economic related issues, as well as the Institute's relations with Capitol Hill and the Washington, D.C. trade community. He serves as the editor for KEI's flagship publication, Korea's Economy, and oversees KEI's blog, The Peninsula. To learn more about Stangarone, click here.

Jin Nam, 1st Secretary, Economic Affairs Section, Embassy of the Republic of Korea

Nam focuses on U.S.--Korea relations and economic issues, including the successful implementation of the Korea-U.S. Free Trade Agreement and the New-Frontier cooperation in areas like Space, Cyber-security and Climate Change. Prior to D.C., Nam worked at the Presidential Office (the 'Blue House') in Korea as the Assistant Secretary to the President for Foreign Affairs.